Biography

Sora Kang is an associate in our Atlanta office, where she practices in medical malpractice, health care, general liability, international business, and business litigation matters.

Prior to joining HBS, Sora worked as an associate at a civil defense firm and gained experience in representing general liability and business litigation cases. She also served as a law clerk to the Honorable Jason B. Thompson with the Fayette County State Court.

Sora earned her Juris Doctor from Emory University School of Law, where she was awarded the Emory Public Interest Committee Grant. During her time in law school, she interned for the Honorable Dorian Henriquez-Simons with the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission. She also earned her Master of Laws from Indiana University, Master of Arts in Law from Sungkyunkwan University, and Bachelor of Arts in Law from Seowon University.
