Biography

Christian Ferlan is an Associate in our office in Charlotte, North Carolina. He focuses his practice on the defense of law enforcement agencies as well as general liability, long-term care, and real estate matters.

Christian has gained valuable experience defending local governments, law enforcement officers, and fire departments in a wide variety of cases under federal and state law. Christian has defended cases implicating the First, Fourth, and Fourteenth Amendments as well as the North Carolina Constitution, including federal and state appeals. He has also advised local governments on ordinance drafting and legislation. Christian has also represented individuals and long-term care facilities in a wide range of professional negligence and general liability claims in state court and arbitration.

In addition to litigating, Christian has worked with private companies and municipalities on matters involving real estate transactions, zoning compliance, and government relations.

He earned a Juris Doctor with honors from the University of North Carolina School of Law. Christian completed his Bachelor of Arts in
