Biography

Dylan P. Angeline is an associate in our Birmingham office, where he practices in business litigation, general liability, government affairs, health care advisory services, labor and employment, and medical malpractice matters.

Prior to joining HBS, Dylan served as a senior health policy legal analyst with Aptive Resources, where he led development for national health care practitioner scopes of practice and pandemic responses. He also served on the UAB Strategic Planning Council, advising on and collaborating with the office of general counsel to navigate state certificate of need requests, telehealth implementation, and other regulatory matters.

Dylan also previously worked for a regional litigation boutique, and brings extensive experience in the defense of medical malpractice, professional liability, and general litigation matters to the firm. He has successfully defended medical malpractice claims against numerous healthcare entities including substance abuse clinics, large academic medical centers, and surgical centers. He has handled transportation and general liability matters for national insurance carriers and self-insured defendants. He has also
