Biography

Margaret “Meg” Fowler is an associate attorney in Hall Booth Smith’s Denver office, where she focuses her practice on business litigation, dental, general liability, governmental liability, health care, insurance coverage, and medical malpractice.

Meg brings a diverse litigation and health care background to her practice, with experience spanning private practice, federal judicial clerkships, and an in-house role with a large health care organization. She has handled matters involving significant legal and compliance issues, including complex civil litigation, government and regulatory investigations, and internal investigations. Meg draws on her valuable insight from this varied background to provide clients with strategic advice and support through all phases of litigation and regulatory enforcement proceedings.

Meg earned both her Juris Doctor and Master of Science in Finance from Vanderbilt University. While attending law school, she was a Senior Managing Editor for the Vanderbilt Journal of Entertainment and Technology Law and an Articles Editor for the Environmental Law and Policy Annual Review. Prior to law school, she served as a
