Biography

Morgan McClure is an associate in the Atlanta office, where she focuses her practice on appellate, education, and governmental liability matters.

Before joining the firm, Morgan gained extensive experience in education and government law through a variety of legal internships and externships. At the Georgia Institute of Technology, she worked with both the Office of Equal Opportunity, Compliance, and Conflict Management and the Georgia Tech Athletic Association, where she researched Title IX and NCAA legal issues, attended investigatory meetings, and drafted and reviewed athletics and employment contracts.

Earlier in her career, Morgan served as a legal intern for the Forsyth County Schools Board of Education, where she prepared legal memoranda, reviewed district policies for compliance with state and federal laws, and advised on human resources matters. While attending Georgia State University College of Law, she also supported the Maurice R. Greenberg School of Risk Science as a Graduate Teaching Assistant, assisting students with legal writing and providing substantive feedback on coursework.
