Biography

Robert McLeod is an Associate in our Denver office where he practices in aging services, business litigation, general liability, health care, medical malpractice, products liability, and professional malpractice and ethics matters. He is also a part of the National Counsel Trial team.

Prior to joining HBS, Robert was a trial associate representing health care professionals in complex professional liability and product liability cases in federal and state court. He has extensive trial experience and has defended health care providers and entities in birth trauma, wrongful death, and other significant and debilitating medical claims. He also focused on health care liability litigation as a member of the pharmaceutical, medical device, and health care litigation practice groups defending manufacturers in product liability cases.

Robert earned his Juris Doctor from Vanderbilt University, where he was a publications editor for the Vanderbilt Journal of Entertainment and Technology Law and received the Scholastic Excellence Award in Education Law. He earned his Bachelor of Arts in Psychology from the University of Texas.
